

Carol Lonidier
Chief executive officer

Since Review Med was founded in 1997, Carol Lonidier has served as the company's chief executive officer. In this capacity, Lonidier oversees the firm's financial management, as well as its peer review and legal functions.

Lonidier specializes in start-up and management of medical companies. She launched her career in the medical field by opening a practice for an ear-nose-and-throat physician in Louisiana.

After moving to Texas, Lonidier joined two well-known Dallas physicians as the administrator of their medical practice in 1988. Over a decade, she helped grow the business from a single office that depended almost entirely on Medicare-funded cases to a practice with 12 office locations and six doctors. She implemented a strategy that moved the practice into the more lucrative areas of worker's compensation and PPO-funded patients. In 1992, she managed the launch of a North Dallas physical therapy clinic, which later was sold to NovaCare. Another physical therapy clinic Lonidier helped open in 1997 was sold to HealthSouth in 1999.

In 1997, Lonidier was tapped to launch a medical review practice for the doctors, and Review Med was born. She continued to manage the medical practice until 1999, when she moved to Review Med full-time.
